Sarkis J. Zoubian
National Defense University Capstone
Deputy Director for Operations

Sarkis Zoubian is a native of Charlotte, North Carolina. He graduated from the University of South Carolina – Columbia with one major in Anthropology and another in English Writing. While there, he worked at the South Carolina Institute for Anthropology and Archaeology and was the head of the University Writers' Club. Upon graduation, he received a certificate in teaching and worked as a schoolteacher in the Russian Federation for two years.

In 2020 he returned to the United States to complete a Masters degree in International Peace and Conflict Resolution at American University's (AU) School of International Service in Washington, D.C. While there, he specialized in International Peacebuilding and Negotiation – conducting negotiation and statecraft simulations and leading a team to complete a long-form research project on child labor in the Great Lakes region of Africa for the U.S. Department of Labor. While at AU, Sarkis was granted a Boren Fellowship to study Russian language at Taras Shevchenko University in Kyiv, Ukraine. However, the Russian attack on Ukraine in February 2022 required his Boren Fellowship to be carried out in Almaty, Kazakhstan instead, where he lived for approximately ten months.

Upon returning to the U.S. Sarkis was hired by the National Defense University's (NDU) International Student Management Office. While there, he assisted in organizing two worldwide Alumni conferences and planned field studies for U.S. partner and allied military officers attending NDU. He later transferred to the Capstone program at NDU where he is currently working as the Deputy Director of Operations. There, he works alongside a small team to provide meaningful experiential learning for the senior leaders of tomorrow.

Sarkis is a Presidential Management Fellow and recent graduate of the Department of Defense's Defense Civilian Emerging Leader Program - and continues to keep his Boren language, Russian, sharp at work and in his spare time. He is currently studying Turkish and Turkic languages, and enjoys photography, the outdoors, and art.

BRIGADIER GENERAL NICK HAGUE

Brig. Gen. Nick Hague serves as an active Astronaut at the NASA Johnson Space Center, Houston, Texas. He served as the NASA SpaceX Crew-9 Commander which launched on Sept. 28, 2024, and returned on March 18, 2025, for 171 days. During Expedition 72, Hague and fellow American crew members conducted more than 150 unique experiments and logged over 900 hours of research aboard the orbiting laboratory. Hague completed a spacewalk (his fourth) with NASA astronaut Suni Williams replacing a rate gyro assembly, patching damaged areas on the Neutron star Interior Composition Explorer X-ray telescope, and evaluating procedures for future Alpha Magnetic Spectrometer repairs.

Brig. Gen. Hague was commissioned from the U.S. Air Force Academy and has served on active duty for over 25 years in a variety of educational, research, developmental test, program management and operational positions. After earning his Master of Science degree from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, he served as an Air Force Research Laboratory Program Manager developing advanced spacecraft technologies. He is a graduate of the U.S. Air Force Test Pilot School and served as Chief Flight Test Engineer including deployed experience in Operation Iraqi Freedom conducting experimental airborne reconnaissance. Brig. Gen. Hague then instructed Astronautics at the Air Force Academy. Following his legislative fellowship program, he served as the Congressional Appropriations Liaison for United States Central Command. At the Joint Improvised Explosive Device Defeat Organization, Brig. Gen. Hague served as the Deputy Division Chief for research and development. After completing astronaut candidate training, he joined NASA's Active Astronaut Corps.

Brig. Gen. Hague has accumulated more than 10,000 flying hours in more than 35 spacecraft and aircraft as both a Flight Test Engineer and Astronaut. He completed three spaceflights, amassing 374 days in space performing operations aboard the International Space Station including four spacewalks. Prior to his current position, Brig. Gen. Hague was the Director of Test and Evaluation, Headquarters U.S. Space Force, responsible for the test workforce, infrastructure and related policy.
