Challenges for U.S. strategy in Asia

- ▶ What are we trying to accomplish?
- ▶ The Korean peninsula: can Mr. Kim really be our buddy?
- ▶ An expanding centrality of China
 - ▶ Trade dominance which is indisputable and now Sino-U.S. trade war or not?
 - ▶ Maritime disputes
 - ▶ Hegemony or merely a member state?
 - ▶ What instruments do we have versus them?
 - ▶ Increasingly active globally—a really new twist
- ▶ U.S. alliances—dead, on lifelines, or vibrant? China says ‘encirclement’
- ▶ Expanding Asia to include India good or futile aspiration?

Instruments and options

- ▶ Trade war with Beijing which reverses 70 years of expanding free trade
- ▶ TPP gone so will 20+ bilateral trade agreements be possible for Washington?
- ▶ Any lasting effects from the Obama 'rebalance to Asia'?
- ▶ What is the role for diplomacy in Asia—does it matter?
- ▶ How vibrant are the alliances or are they strictly military?
- ▶ Instruments for the United States beyond Indo-Pacom's role?
- ▶ What are the effects of domestic trends
 - ▶ Budget deficits
 - ▶ 'Model' concerns for democracy
 - ▶ Indo-PACOM's capabilities versus responsibilities

Indo-Asia-Pacific within national priorities

- ▶ North Korea
- ▶ China China China: obvious priority for budget and approach to region
- ▶ Will India be important for us within Indo-Pacom or as adjunct to Pakistan issues?
- ▶ Global center of economic gravity moving to Asia but what about Europe?
- ▶ Should we increase military spending or worry about our huge budget deficit?
- ▶ BOTTOM LINE: do we see this region as our top priority or are we merely accustomed to seeing any competitor's action as threatening?
