A vibrant, stylized painting of a market stall. The scene is filled with various goods and people. In the foreground, several large woven baskets are overflowing with fresh produce, including bunches of yellow bananas, clusters of purple grapes, and several large green watermelons. A woman in a blue shirt and a wide-brimmed white hat is seated on the right, tending to the baskets. To her left, another woman in a yellow top and white skirt is visible. In the background, a man in a pink shirt is seen from behind, and a colorful parrot is perched on a branch on the left. The stall is covered by a thatched roof, and shelves in the background hold various items like jars, bowls, and more produce. The overall style is reminiscent of mid-20th-century Latin American folk art, with bold colors and a focus on everyday life and commerce.

Share of Catholics Decreasing in Latin America; Protestants and Religiously Unaffiliated Increasing

% of total population belonging to each religious group

The historical estimates are from the World Religion Database and the Brazilian and Mexican censuses. The 2014 estimates are based on the Pew Research Center survey. See this report's methodology for more on how population estimates were calculated.

Percentages for each year may not round to 100% due to rounding and the small share of other religious groups not shown in this chart. Estimates include 18 countries and the U.S. territory of Puerto Rico.
